With every American Buildings Company building accreditation comes standard

Using an accredited manufacturer for your next building guarantees you're dealing with an organization that operates at the highest level of ethical, legal and technical standards.

What is the International Accreditation Service (IAS) AC472?

IAS accreditation is a sign of credibility and quality assurance. IAS AC472 was developed specifically for metal building systems. Based on Chapter 17 of the International Building Code, it provides code officials with a means to approve the inspection programs of manufacturers involved in metal buildings systems fabrication. It covers structural welding (modeled after AC172), cold form steel fabrication and engineering. To achieve accreditation, a manufacturer must have in place a comprehensive quality assurance program unequaled in the marketplace.

What is the International Organization for Standardization (ISO) 14001?

ISO 14001 is a standard for Environmental Management Systems (EMS) that applies to all businesses, regardless of size, location or income. The standard aims to continually reduce the environmental footprint of a business and to decrease the pollution and waste a business produces.

ISO & IAS set the standards.

We're committed to exceeding them.

American Buildings Company, our manufacturer, is so committed to environmental and sustainable concepts that they've invested a total of over 10,000 hours in ISO education and training for every team member across all four divisions. By choosing an ISO 14001 and IAS AC472 accredited manufacturer, you'll be working with a company that knows quality building systems and has the expertise, resources and infrastructure to provide quality work.
